

Civil Society, Journalism, and Education

Indiana University, Bloomington - Costa Rica, Ghana, India, Indonesia

University of Minnesota - Brazil

University of Southern California Annenberg - Mexico

IDEAS
PROGRAM

Indiana University, Bloomington

Indiana University, Bloomington, School of Education, aims to develop and support a cohort of faculty members as study abroad mentors with the goal of better engaging and supporting students in study abroad. Faculty mentors will participate in three stages of programming: course development, overseas travel, and overseas leadership training before becoming mentors for students from the “Global Gateway for Teachers” study abroad program.

University of Minnesota

University of Minnesota's College of Education and Human Development, in collaboration with TRIO Student Support Services and community partners from Red Lake Nation, aims to increase access to global programming for students through its new “Self-Actualizing Study Abroad” program. This program will build on the College’s existing partnership with the Universidade Federal of Espirito Santo in Vitória, Brazil, and will explore comparisons between Indigenous communities and social movements in the United States and Brazil.

USC Annenberg

The University of Southern California Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism will develop a dual language, semester-length, hybrid study abroad course in Mexico. The goals of the program are to increase student participation and interest in study abroad, to strengthen civil society by training students in international journalism, and to contribute to deeper understanding in reporting on stories involving the United States and Mexico.